College Preparedness

Cultural Perspective

An Interactive Seminar

By

Dr. Archana Sudame

- Are college admissions influenced by institutional priorities, personal biases, and other subjective factors?
- Which factors are controlled by the school, the colleges, and the students?
- Have the post-pandemic times created new challenges for the next generation?
- Do we look at college admissions from a cultural perspective? If so is our vision vast or limited to our bubble?

Dr. Archana Sudame holds a doctorate degree in Biotechnology from Rutgers University and a post graduate certificate in College Admission Counseling from U.C. Berkeley. Archana has visited hundreds of public and private colleges all across the US, advised or addressed over 3800 students and families, coached and mentored new independent consultants. With her advising philosophy, Archana is more of an educator and an adviser, than a consultant.
